2. Reason for revision

Regarding financial results for the first half of the fiscal year, net sales were driven by significant growth in ink sales across each markets, as well as sales of SG, IP, and TA market products launched between the previous and current fiscal years. In addition, the weaker yen had a positive impact on foreign exchange rates. Consequently, net sales are expected to exceed the previous forecast. With regard to profit, in addition to the effects of cost-reduction initiatives, improvements in the product mix, and favorable foreign exchange rates, the Company also expects to receive a refund of additional U.S. tariffs; as a result, it projects that profits at every stage will significantly exceed forecasts.

With regard to the full-year consolidated financial results, the Company anticipates that the global market environment−including the situation in the Middle East−will continue to be highly uncertain. Net sales for the second half have been revised based on trends by product market and region, as well as the outlook for new product launches. Regarding profit, while the Company is reflecting the upward deviation from the previous forecast in the first-half outlook, it is also factoring in additional growth investments in new areas outlined in its ongoing medium- to long-term growth strategy, Mimaki Innovation 30 (MI30), and is therefore revising its full-year consolidated earnings forecast.

The key exchange rates for the third quarter and beyond, which form the basis for the consolidated earnings forecast, are set at 1 U.S. dollar to 146 yen and 1 euro to 170 yen, with no changes from the previous forecast.

※ The forward-looking statements made in this document, including the earnings forecasts, are based on information currently available to the Company and on certain assumptions deemed to be reasonable by the Company. Actual performance and other results may differ materially owing to various factors.
