4. Views on securing a degree of independence from the controlling shareholder, etc.

The TV broadcasting business, which is the Company's main business, is subject to regulation under laws such as the Radio Act and the Broadcasting Act due to the scarcity of broadcasting frequencies and the highly public nature of its activities. In addition, the Company is required to practice self-discipline regarding the content of broadcasts under independent initiatives as a broadcasting business operator.

The Company has a cooperative relationship with its parent company, etc. in the TV broadcasting business, as described above. However, it retains exclusive programming rights, which are regarded as the most important rights of a broadcasting business operator. It also maintains its own judgment regarding management decisions regarding business operations and decisions on the procurement of funds, etc.

Moreover, individuals with strong ties to the parent company, etc. do not comprise the majority of the Company's Board of Directors. The Board of Directors checks the terms, transaction volume, and other details of major business transactions with The Asahi Shimbun Company and TOEI COMPANY, LTD. before and after such transactions are executed.

For these reasons, the Company's independence from both companies is sufficiently secured.
