Notice Concerning Equipment Malfunction at the Company's Ashikaga Plant

Oiles Corporation (the "Company") hereby announces that the performance testing equipment at the Company's Ashikaga Plant, where seismic isolation and vibration control products are manufactured, has been out of operation since October 1, 2025, due to a malfunction.

The Company anticipates that restoring the equipment will require a certain period of time. In the meantime, alternative measures are being considered, including the use of other in-house equipment and external performance testing facilities. Please note that shipments of certain products may be affected.

Furthermore, the Company is currently assessing the potential impact of this matter on its consolidated financial results. Should any information requiring disclosure arise, the Company will promptly make such disclosure.
