2. Reasons for differences

In the household equipment business, sales of high value-added sewing machines with high profit margins performed well, mainly in the North American market. In the industrial equipment business, in response to increased demand in Asian markets, by promoting proactive sales activities, orders for desktop robots and servo presses expanded. The IT-related business achieved record-high profits on the back of stable sales. As a result, net sales, operating profit, ordinary profit, and profit attributable to owners of the parent all exceeded the previous forecast.
