2. Reasons for the revisions

In terms of net sales, particularly in the Living and Industrial Materials business, domestic demand has remained stable, and demand for the Company's flagship products has remained steady. However, after comprehensively considering the fact that demand for existing businesses in information-related businesses has declined more than anticipated, the Company has revised its forecast downward.

In terms of profits, in response to the rise in raw material prices caused by the situation in the Middle East, the Company has continued to pass on higher costs to customers since the beginning of the current fiscal year. In addition, profitability has improved due to factors such as the expansion of high-value-added products. As a result, operating profit and ordinary profit are both now expected to exceed the initial forecast.

Profit attributable to owners of parent is also expected to exceed the initial forecast, owing to an increase in gain on sale of investment securities associated with rising stock prices.

(Note) The abovementioned financial results forecast has been prepared based on information currently available to the Company, and actual results may differ from these forecasts due to various factors in the future.
